Religion should never dictate education. Church schools brainwash kids. You can only opt out of learning about other religions and not the Christian bit – how would they have good knowledge and understanding of other world faiths? We are not religions but there is no respect for this in this school, it was our last choice, there were only 2 non-denominational schools – which we put first.	Parents do have the opportunity to opt pupils out of collective worship and/or RE lessons if they so desire and this is recorded in our school policy. Policy to be re-issued to parents in term 5
I am so pleased we chose Lympne School for our children. They obviously learnt about Christianity, other religions and faith, but it goes far deeper. The children encounter the Christian ethos at all levels and it penetrates deeply to help develop kind, loving, thoughtful children. This is seen in the way teachers are with children and the head and all support staff. The Christian character of the school has been evolved thorough the care, concern and genuine love of all the children at Lympne. My kids are happy, feel safe and enjoy collective worship and RE; particularly whether it be acting out different things or creating art work linked to RE.
